Perpetual Welcome...

CrossroadsConnection.com is all about creating a centralized 'GOLDEN ROLODEX' for city-reachers to use in common, to help build great relationships. You might say we're "spinning connections into gold". Visit Wikipedia.org for current insights into 'social networking' and 'open source software'. It may then become obvious why we're actively building this site, and why we're using open-source software (and an open-source mindset to accelerate reaching our cities for Christ).

See Phil's post re Peter Wagner's book... and a key chapter within it. Whether any of us agrees or disagrees with all of it, there's great stuff that needs to be considered and discussed by city-reachers everywhere. And let's see where it takes us.

What is WYSIWYG

Submitted by jkoenig on Mon, 2006-07-03 14:00.

WYSIWYG is an acronym that means What You See Is What You Get. You can now use a WYSIWYG tool when posting articles to CrossroadsConnection.com.

For most users it is easier to use formatting tools that are similar to MS Word or other popular word editing tools.

The advantages of WYSIWYG are:

- You get what you see
- No need to learn HTML
- You get what you see

And what elements should be contained in such 'covenants'? Statement of Faith? What else?

Tech Mission Network... in Indy?

Submitted by indychristian on Sun, 2006-07-02 15:12. TechMission

[We're herein starting to 'build the case' for an Indianapolis (loose) 'network' of TechMission related Christian community computing centers. We'd like our 'Urban Tech Day' to help us find or build relationships with other likeminded churches or community centers. What would be the real synergies of such a network, above and beyond what we already have by just being an association member?]

Tech Mission Network in Indy (and other cities) ???

What could be the advantages to building closer ties with other TM members in our city?
